But this view could simply be a case of those with higher levels of privilege acting to gain an advantage through means for those at the bottom with the same level of privilege. In truth, our motivation for sacrificing is rooted in a deeper moral compass, one rooted in understanding and self-awareness of our own worth, our collective contributions to the world. It is a moral truth about what makes human beings who are valued in other people's eyes worthy or undeserving. By sacrificing, we are trying to get as good..
